Cultivation of rice and maize

Agroforestry

Small farmholders tend more subtropical forest crops but the main cash crop is still agriculture, especially maize which also dominates. Deforestation continues and the area is becoming increasingly arid. Deforestation is mainly due to the cutting of trees for fuel wood and agriculture.

The landholders and small farmers have adopted various measures to combat desertification. These include the use of windbreaks, contour plowing, and the planting of native grasses and shrubs to stabilize the soil and reduce erosion.

Deforestation has led to soil degradation and loss of soil fertility, which has further contributed to desertification.
